

Riverside Partners Teams with Management to Acquire Maxvision

October 2007

Boston, MA

Riverside Partners, based in Boston, MA, is pleased to announce that it has partnered with management to acquire Maxvision.

Maxvision designs and manufactures extreme performance, rugged, portable computer workstations for commercial and military applications. The Company's products have quickly become the reference standard for portable workstations used in geospatial imaging as well as command and control applications; applications that are critical for both the military and intelligence sectors. Maxvision also designs systems for commercial OEM's and resellers providing portable video editing systems, web streaming, and presentation recording systems. Maxvision is well positioned to benefit from future market growth driven by the specific needs of demanding applications such as uncompressed high definition video. Maxvision is headquartered in Madison, AL.

"Riverside is extremely excited about our partnership with Maxvision. The Company's position as an innovator of enabling technology for mobile command and control computing for the military as well as their position in the commercial HD video market make the company a perfect fit with Riverside's technology investment portfolio. The management team has done an impressive job of growing the business and we are excited to be their partners for the next phase of growth," said David Belluck, a General Partner at Riverside.

"Riverside's understanding of founder-owned companies and Maxvision's business make them an ideal partner for us. Our partnership with Riverside will allow us to invest in our infrastructure so that Maxvision can continue providing innovative products with industry leading quality and service," said Bruce Imsand, Founder and CEO of Maxvision.
